Proclamation

by Governor Jim Justice

Whereas, West Virginia has been home to some of the country’s most influential African-American scholars and leaders; and

Whereas, Dr. Carter G. Woodson, taught high school in Winona, West Virginia; was principal of Douglass High School in Huntington, West Virginia; served as Academic Dean at West Virginia Collegiate Institute, now West Virginia State University; and founded what is today’s Black History Month; and

Whereas, Dr. Leon Sullivan, born October 16, 1922, in Charleston, West Virginia, was the first African-American member of the Board of Directors at the General Motors Corporation and his “Sullivan Principles” played a key role in the downfall of apartheid; and

Whereas, Booker T. Washington, raised in Malden, West Virginia, founded Alabama’s Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute in 1881, and was the foremost black educator of the late 19th and early 20th centuries; and

Whereas, Henry Louis Gates, born in Piedmont, West Virginia, in 1950, is a renowned educator, scholar, literary critic, and writer; and

Whereas, the Herbert Henderson Office of Minority Affairs was established in 2012 by the West Virginia Legislature; and

Whereas, Black History Month is a time set aside to reflect on the achievements of the African-American community and recognize and honor these contributions.

Now, Therefore, Be it Resolved that I, Jim Justice, Governor of the Great State of West Virginia, do hereby proclaim February 2022 as:

Black History Month

in the Mountain State and encourage all citizens to recognize the many contributions made by African-Americans in West Virginia and the nation.

In Witness Whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State of West Virginia to be affixed.

Done at the Capitol, City of Charleston, State of West Virginia, this the Thirty-first day of January, in the year of our Lord, Two Thousand Twenty-Two, and in the One Hundred Fifty-Ninth year of the State.

By the Governor:

Mac Warner
Secretary of State
